SLEEPING AND WAKING.

My wife had left her home to seek,
The glow worshipped in her cheek
Like Persian oil; my sky had paled—
A letter every day I mail'd,
And oft given, covereth a multitude of shortcomings.
None of us can forget that it was the panacea of childhood. To women it is as necessary as the sunshine and dew to the rose. We refer not to the "strong minded" of the sex, who, in their boastful independence, find all that is needful to existence within themselves, but to those gentle, domestic beings who make glad homes. A frequent, heart-given kiss will keep fresh the sweetness which otherwise would turn to coldness or indifference.

The lover bestows them profusely on his sweetheart, and marvels at her loveliness as she condescends to meet him. She is beautiful, for joy has made her so. The husband gives them not, and soon is wondering at the change so brief a period has wrought in his wife. Although she listens anxiously for his footfalls, her face does not brighten as of yore, nor does she spring to meet him for the caress she yearns for, but knows well not to give. She becomes exacting, and if he is belated, asks reproachfully how he can stay away so long from his family, which meets with an acid reply. They preside silently at the meal, viewing in an apparent unconsciousness of each other's presence, the silence only disturbed by the crowing blue-eyed baby in the mother's arms.

With the first unkind word a charm has been broken, and imperfections have been exhibited which the soil of love had covered. The wife has even become suspicious of her husband's truth, though he is faithful as the needle to the pole.

This is a sad picture, but too often true, and followed by a life of regrets that two should have committed so gross an error as to be unequally yoked. Their ideas, tastes, and ambition may flow in the same channel; the love of Christ may dwell in the heart of each, and life would be next door to Heaven but for the erroneous step taken by the young husband, which has raised a dust, obscuring the once clear vision of his wife.

Men are repelled by woman's coldness or indifference. Scolding they cannot endure, and treat it with scornful muteness, sharp rejoinders, or leave the house, until, as they wittingly say, "the domestic atmosphere has cleared off." They cast all the blame upon their wives; and friends who obtain glimpses behind the scenes ensure them to, when the mistake which has expanded into a sin originated with the husband.

When man perceives that a woman's manner is less wifely than he desires, let him censure his own conduct, and see if it has been as tender as when first he fondly called her his own. Let him see if he has not become too matter-of-fact, which manner his wife strongly reflects.

Woman must have demonstrations of affection. Her nature requires them. Man is the head to whom she not only proudly looks for support, leans upon for comfort, but draws her earth-happiness from his manifested love. When our fellow-beings think and tell us we are perfect, we dare not appear otherwise. When they consider us beautiful, we wreath our face in smiles to render it so.

It is a little act, requiring no waste of time, to lay now and then our check to the one we love, to stroke back the hair, to send a thrill through the fingers by a pressure and seal with kisses the lips that would chide us when we have tarried from their presence. When these very trifles make up the sum of a clinging, loving, pure woman's happiness, will you, who glory in the strength and bravery of your manhood, withhold them?

You are the mighty column—a nation's pride, but without the Corinthian cap which completes, unless you wife crown you with the tendrils and leaves of her well-founded trust. Will you forfeit your crown by slight? Will you not treat lovingly the wife who can say, in the beautiful language which Scott puts into the mouth of Amy, wife of Leicester, "All that woman can, I have given him, name and fame. A queen could give him no more?"

Will you not give every evidence that is needful to the happiness of the mother of your children? to her who has watched prayerfully beside your bed of pain when others slept? Will you not, and reap the reward of the faithful, "well done."

SIT LUX.

The wonderful value of interest is well enough illustrated by a slight anecdote told of the millionaire Stephen Whitney. In a thoughtless moment he was about to give a penny to a beggar, but arrested his hand in time, saying, "I am disposed to do so—I don't care for the penny, but I should lose the interest forever, and I really can't afford that."

I Wish I Had Capital.

So we heard a great strapping young man exclaim the other day in an office. We did want to give him a piece of our mind so bad; and we'll just write to him. You want capital, do you? And suppose you had what you call capital, what would you do with it? You want capital! Haven't you hands and feet, and muscle and bone, and brains, and don't you call them capital? What more capital did God give anybody? "O, but they are not money," say you. But they are more than money, and nobody can take them from you. Don't you know how to use them? If you don't it's time you were learning. Take hold of the plow, or hoe, or jack plane, or broad-ax, and go to work. Your capital will soon yield you a large interest. Ay, but there's the rub! You don't want to work; you want money on credit, so you may play gentleman and speculate, and end by playing the vagabond.

You want a plantation with plenty of hirlings upon it to do the work, while you run over the country and dissipate; or you want to marry some rich girl who may be foolish enough to take you for your good looks, that she may support you.

Shame on you, young man! Go to work with the capital you have, and you'll soon make interest enough upon it to give you as much money as you want and make you feel like a man. If you can't make money on what capital you have, you could not make it if you had a million dollars in money. If you don't know how to use bone, muscle and brains, you would not know how to use gold. If you let the capital that you have lie idle, and waste and rust out, it would be the same thing with you if you had gold; you would only know how to waste it.

Then don't stand about idle, a

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,

HORATIO SEYMOUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

FRANK P. BLAIR, JR., OF MISSOURI.

Senator Morton's Speech.

The growing weakness of the Radical party, especially in the West, is demonstrated by the tone and character of the speeches made by its orators. Senator Morton, on his return to Indianapolis from Washington, had a large public reception and delivered his views on the politics of the day. We desire to speak with respect of the leader of the Radicals in Indiana, for he is a man of unquestioned ability, but we utter the sentiments of every thoughtful and candid man when we say that the whole speech from beginning to end, abounds in false statements, gross misrepresentations and undignified clap-trap. It is unworthy of a man of reputed talents. It discusses nothing, explains nothing, answers nothing. It is mere statement, bold assertion and reckless untruth. It falsifies the platform of the New York Convention and ascribes to its nominal purposes and aims that have no foundation in fact. It is the appeal of a demagogue to the worst passions and meanest prejudices of his party. That we do not render violence to Morton's utterances, let us examine a few of them. He asserts that the contest between the two political parties is the same now, though changed in form, that was waged between the rebel and Federal armies. The same in what? The issues that caused the war were secession and slavery. The South contended for the doctrine of secession; the North opposed; the South wanted slavery perpetuated and extended, the North opposed.

The Democratic papers are publishing

Morton's speech as a campaign document.

It deserves to be read. It is the best that can be said for the Radicals.

he principal of the five-twentieths should be paid in coin. Many Republicans hold to the same views with the Democrats on this question. No recognized organ or leader of the Democracy are for the government breaking in any respect its faith with its creditors. Payment according to the letter and spirit is what they contend for.

Another silly declaration of Gov. Morton's is that the Democrats will re-establish slavery if they come into power. No Republican is simple and credulous enough to believe this. The negro could not be re-enslaved if the Democracy desired it. They do not desire it. They have had enough of slavery, and now that the negro has been freed by the results of the war, they have accepted, as an established fact, that this question has been forever set at rest by the war and is never to be revived, and thus Gov. Morton could have found out was the faith of the Democratic party by referring to the New York platform.

These are a few specimens of Gov. Morton's fairness and candor. He does not dare to assail the principles laid down by the New York Convention, because they are impregnable. He has not the courage to meet the issues boldly and squarely made by the platform. He studiously avoids or obscures the great points of difference between the two parties. He endeavours to hide the weakness of his cause by the ingenuity and finesse of the advocate. He would delude the intelligence of the country by the false and absurd cry that the Democracy are for war and that with their accession we will be visited by the calamities and sorrows and woes of another direful civil conflict. He raises a laugh by facetious allusions to the negro, and causes faint applause by an unmannerly and unjust assault on Blair's letter. But all these subterfuges will avail nothing. It profits nothing to travel so far out of the record. The people are beginning to think and reflect for themselves, and to break away from the bondage of party leaders. They see through the shallow artifices of such clap-trap orators as Morton and even thinking Radicals are repudiating such flimsy and groundless attacks upon that great party that upholds the Constitution.

The Democratic papers are publishing Morton's speech as a campaign document. It deserves to be read. It is the best that can be said for the Radicals.

Congress.

This body, which has been in continuous session for more than one year, has adjourned until 21st September next. For this brief respite from despotism, unconstitutional legislation and barbarian vengeance, the country should feel thankful and breath freer. But for the exigencies of the Presidential campaign and the growing certainty of Radical defeat, we should have had a perpetual session.

The history of the Fortieth Congress is unparalleled in our annals. It will live in the blackest records of infamy. For the weal of the Republic, it took no thought for the perpetuation of party ascendancy, many. It introduced no resolve, conceived no scheme and passed no measure that did not relate to a tenure on power. In all that is mean, wicked and devilish, it passed beyond its immediate predecessor. The people never expected much and they have not been disappointed. Nobody indulged the chimerical hope that a body actuated by such motives as have influenced this illustrious conclave, would transform themselves into statesmen and look after the interests of the Republic. It found political affairs in a state of complication and confusion; it has left them in greater anarchy and chaos. It has given no relief to a nation oppressed by grievous taxation; it has not solved the problem for the reduction and funding of the public debt; it has not brought peace and tranquillity to a land longing for peace and quiet; in short, it has not done one single thing to recommend it in patriotic eyes or to rescue its memory from contempt and obloquy.

Gov. Morton again asserts that Southern men, the Generals of rebel armies, controlled the New York Convention. This history of the Convention proves this to be an unmitigated untruth. It shows that the Southern delegates were not forward in the proceedings of the Convention; that they went to New York resolved to let the Democracy of the North select the candidate. Previous to the meeting of the Convention, public sentiment in the South pointed to no particular man as its choice. The unanimous expression of Southern journals and speakers was that the South should abide by the wisdom of the North in the selection. The published proceedings contradict Gov. Morton's statement. The behavior of the Southern delegates was modest and unpretentious, and they came forward only at the bidding of their Northern allies. This effort to prejudice the public mind against Seymour and Blair by calling them the candidates of the Southern delegates, is almost too shallow and silly to merit notice. Seymour and Blair are the candidates of the whole Democratic party.

Gov. Morton again declares that if the Democratic party is successful, the national debt will be repudiated. Where does he get his authority for this statement? Can he show by any action of the Democratic party that they have ever contended for repudiation? He argues that they were opposed to the creation of the debt and very logically concludes, therefore, they will repudiate when they come into power.

Political parties are to be judged by their public records, by their announced declaration of principles, and by the utterances of their leading men; and when, in any of these, has any Democrat urged the repudiation of the Government obligations? The platform declares that the bonds shall be paid according to the pledged faith of the government; that when upon their face or by the law of their issue, it is provided they shall be paid in coin, the Democracy will repudiate when they come into power. The people will excuse it from reassembling. We have had enough of it. May Providence preserve us from the shame and infamy of its further legislation!

ARREST OF GEN. BUTLER.—Writs from the Superior Court of Baltimore city, in two suits, were served on Gen. Butler, as he passed through Baltimore a few days ago, one for false imprisonment.

Whereupon it is made the duty of the Collector to send a gauger and have the packages stamped with a stamp denoting that they contained spirits upon which tax had been paid prior to the passage of the act, and the date of the inspection. If this notice is not given before thirty days after the passage of the act, the spirits will be seized and the packages not stamped declared the property of the United States. This law only gives dealers until the 20th of August to have their old stocks reported and stamped.

Good News.

Occasionally the Radicals experience a hitch in their reconstruction machinery. The Georgia Legislature has elected two Democrats to the United States Senate, Joshua Hill and M. V. Miller. The "carpet-baggers" were handsomely defeated. When we remember the oppression which has been inflicted upon this State, the consulate established over her territory, the frauds in the registration and election, the military edicts and proclamations to terrorize the citizens, it is a matter of some astonishment to witness such a triumph of conservatism. It shows a returning sense of right and justice and is the precursor of a general revolt against the revolutionary measures of Congress. It is a loud protest against the folly and wickedness of the party in power. It evidences that the tide is turning and heralds the coming victory in November. Publish it in Gath and tell it in the streets of Ascalon that a State which has passed through all the intricate and complex processes of reconstruction, that has, since the close of the war, been under the rigors of bayonet rule, that has had her local laws disregarded and her white men disfranchised, has thrown off the yoke of bondage and turned its eye once more towards the bulwarks of

The Issue Before the Country.

The Louisville Courier says the address of the Chairman of the Pennsylvania Democratic Committee sums up in a few words the true issues involved in the pending political contest: "The statesman against the soldier, intellect against force, the law against the sword." These antitheses set forth the distinctive principles of the two parties. In Horatio Seymour the Democratic party presents to the country a man of intellect, an enlightened statesman, an able constitutional lawyer, who knows the rights of the people and is ready to maintain those rights, even amid the excitement engendered by the war, while holding his own section, and yielding the ablest support to the Government of the United States, he silenced within the limits of New York the tinkling of Mr. Seward's little bell, and enforced, as Governor of the State, respect for the citizen. His firm attitude caused the arbitrary Secretary of State to open the doors of his numerous bastiles and restore to their homes many innocent victims of despotic power. As supporter of the government of which his State formed a part, he did not hesitate to throw forward thousands of State troops to prevent Pennsylvania from invasion; but as a conservator of the civil rights of the citizen, he bade Mr. Seward and Mr. Stanton refrain from arbitrary and lawless arrests of citizens who were under his protection.

Conduct which thus commands Mr. Seymour to the admiration of every true patriot, has, as may have been anticipated, awakened all the malevolence of the enemies of constitutional liberty. The Stevenses, the Summers, the Butlers, the Colfaxes and all the "little bell" system of government almost foam at the mouth with the prospect of the election of a man to the Presidency who is able and willing to protect their victims from arbitrary arrest, and restore to the citizens throughout the whole land the right of the writ of habeas corpus, and the trial by jury. The election of Mr. Seymour will effectively put an end to such an arbitrary system of tyranny as that which has been established by the Radicals, and will restore to every citizen the consciousness of the fact that he is still a freeman. The age of bastiles and little bells will then pass away; military commissions will be arraigned before the civil tribunals; arbitrary satraps will be dethroned and will subside into their original political insignificance; the army will be employed to protect and not oppress the citizen, and civil law and it will prevail where now the voice of justice is silenced by the roll of the drum and the liberty of the citizen is impaled upon the bayonets of the soldiers.

The Democratic ticket admirably illustrates the principles of the party. As advocates of the supremacy of the civil over the military department of the Government, Horatio Seymour, the enlightened statesman, is the first on the ticket and Francis P. Blair, the distinguished citizen soldier, the second. On the ticket itself may be read the principles of the party—subordination of the military to the civil authorities, and the supremacy of law over force.

The Radical ticket—Grant and Colfax—equally indicates the policy of the Radical party, which looks to military supremacy in every department of the Government. Military bureaux for counties, military governors for States, military satrapies, military commissions in lieu of the civil courts, military detectives in place of grand juries, have already been established, and administered the justice of the bayonet over many States of the Union.—As a fit sequel to what has already been inaugurated, it only remains for the Radical party to extend the military system of government over all the States by electing their military chief as the representative of the military supremacy which they advocate.

The St. Louis Republican says the prediction that Missouri will go Democratic this year, "may be relied on." The Radicals have no hope of carrying the election, except by the rigid enforcement of the registration acts, by which they expect thousands and thousands of legal voters will be kept from the polls. But the Republicans add: "Even with the aid of that law, they cannot succeed. They are in a minority. Making the disenchanted lists as large as they can, they will still be in a minority in the State. Their party has become odious to thousands of its own members, and is a stench in their nostrils. They will co-operate with the Democracy, insuring a Democratic triumph in November.

Judge M. M. Cassidy, of Montgomery county, is favorably mentioned by a correspondent of the Mt. Sterling Sentinel as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress. The District could not be represented by one who would be more faithful and true to its interests.—Judge C. is a consistent and life-long Democrat, and the party could find no one who would more firmly and zealously sustain its principles. It is encouraging to us to know that the once humble bachelor editor is now a happy married man, living on his fine plantation, acting as Judge of his county and favorably spoken of for Congress.—Paris Kentuckian.

The Election.

The election, so far as we have heard, passed off quietly on Monday last. We have received no official returns up to the time of going to press, though from present indications it is thought a light vote has been polled. Stevenson's majority will probably reach from 50,000 to 60,000. The official vote of Montgomery county will be found in another column.

AD Umbrellas at Frank, Gump & Co's.

There are at the present time thirteen persons confined in our county jail. Probe says it is like an omnibus—there is always room for one more.

AD John W. Clay & Son, wholesale liquor dealers of this place, sold one day last week, 200 barrels of whiskey to a firm in New York at $1.35 per gallon. The whiskey is two years old.

AD "Grand entrance" of new styles of clothing by Frank, Gump & Co. *

AD Jas Anderson, who was arrested in this county soon after the killing of Sid Smith, in Powell, sometime since, charged with that offense, was tried at Stanton last week and acquitted. Messrs. Holt and Daniel for the defense, and Messrs. Reid and White for the prosecution.

We received a communication from a friend in Morgan county a few days ago, but as the election has passed, and as the letter was chiefly devoted to that it loses its interest. We would be pleased to hear from Morgan frequently.

AD Statements of the Aetna and Putnam Insurance Companies will be found in our columns to day. These companies are sound, and are abundantly able to meet all their losses. Wm. Hoffman is the agent at this place.

AD Who is your clothier? Frank, Gump & Co. *

ANOTHER SALE OF WHISKEY—Howard, Barnes & Co., of the Montgomery Distillery, received an order one day last week from Mr. Charlton Alexander, for 200 barrels of their whiskey, but were able to furnish only 50 barrels.

AD Why was the negro who stole $40 in greenbacks and $20 in silver from one of his brethren, caught? Because he wore a suit of Frank, Gump & Co's. *

AD We are indebted to Col. J. J. Miller, editor of the Farmer's Home Journal, and Secretary of the Kentucky State Agricultural Society, for a complimentary ticket to the tenth annual fair of that Society. The fair will be held near Louisville, on the 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th days of September next.

AD It will be seen by an advertisement in another column that Shelt. Cassity has erected his mule stocks on the Mayville pike, near the Hindston bridge, and that he is now prepared to shoe mules in the best manner. Mr. C. is a good workman, as all for whom he has worked will attest.

AD Marshal Burroughs arrested a one-armed negro boy named Barney Dale, on Thursday last, charged with stealing a lot of bacon from Johnson & Wilson. As the evidence is pretty conclusive against Barney, we suppose he will have his "bacon saved" at the next term of the Circuit Court.

AD SEATON & BLATTERMAN.—We call the attention of the people of North-Eastern Kentucky to the advertisement of the above firm. They have in store a stock of goods second to no establishment in the West, which they will sell at Cincinnati quotations. They are prompt, reliable business men, and can be relied upon in all transactions.

AD ALMOST A FIRE—About 9 o'clock, on last Wednesday night after prayer meeting at the new Christian Church, as Mr. John Manpin was putting out the lights one of the Chandalis' fell, breaking one of the lamps. The oil immediately spread and took fire, and for a few moments it looked as if we were going to have a large fire, but fortunately it was extinguished before any considerable damage was done.

AD GREENBRIAR SCHOOL.—It will be seen by an advertisement which we publish in another column, that Miss Lou. Alden has returned to this county, and has taken charge of the above school. Miss Alden is a very popular teacher, and the mere announcement that she is to again conduct this institution of learning, is sufficient to insure her a full school.

AD We understand a man named Wash Trimble was taken from his residence in the lower part of the county a few nights ago by several men, and thrashed with switches and cowhides, and ordered to leave the neighborhood in three days, but thinking it not safe to remain until the expiration of that time, he left the same night. He was of a bad character, and has been a great pest to the neighborhood.

Billing Closes out his Light Wares.

If you want to buy repentence at the highest market price, invest in tite boots. I had rather be a receiver of stolen goods than the keeper ov other folks' secrets.

Everybody ought tew be obliged tew rite his own epitaph, and then, if he filled the bill while living, his tombstone indorsed with it after he was dead.

I never knew a very hansom woman ingaged in the "woman's rites" business; they can play the kards they already play tew better advantage.

True happiness seems tew consist in being filled with wants and passions, and keeping the wants and passions on a milk diet. Instinct tells the animals how tew supply their wants, and that is all reason kan din for us humans.

When day breaks the assets are always light.

After awl the philosophy I kan kram up, I sometimes git disgusted with life. It seems to be an uncertain victory over base passions that even a mule don't hav.

Men are perfectly delited in being cheated, and then they are disgusted—not with the fraud but the loss of novelty.

It is a kurious fact that with a world full or pleasure, our principle enjoyment iz in hope.

There iz wun mortification (that I kan remember now) in being rich, and that iz you are blattered before your face, and abused behind it.

I have always considered abstract dogs a good thing, but I kould never appreciate the utter necessity ov keeping a woodcock dog in a thickly settled city exclusively on porterhouse steak; when there weanzt a live woodcock within 230 miles ov me; but there iz plenty ov folks who kan, which shows how little I know about it.

I am loudly in favor ov new things, but I am opposed tu envy man, even wun ov our colored associates, thinkin he has discovered a new truth just because he haz, for the first time in his life, stumbled onto a old wnn.

I should be ashamed ov myself to say a harsh word against the noble animal—the hoss; but I haven't been able tew see that it is best tew let the breed ov mankind run out just for the sake ov getting a hoss that kin trot in 2 16.

I have noticed that those persons who hav the keenest sense ov misery, hav also the brightest visions of joy; but there iz sum folks whom even molasses kandy won't make happy, nor even musketeers worry.

I don't think there iz enny more excuse for keepin a Shanghai rooster than there iz in keepin a hoss that you've got 'em buck up to a second story window tew put the crooper on.

It iz astonishin how very small they ware their pantilones in Broadway; but I notice the pantilones are plenty big enuff for the legs.

When I see an old nizzen in the midst ov hiz wealth, I consider him just about as happy as a fly who has fell intu a quart bowl ov molasses and kant git out.

Mental Activity During Sleep.

An officer in the Louisburg expedition, in 1757, was so easily imbibed with thoughts during sleep by a whisper, that his brother officers were wont to amuse themselves in this way at his expense.—They could produce in him any kind of dreams, followed by bodily movements or actions, by whispering into his ear, especially if this was done by friends with whose voice he was familiar. On one occasion they conducted him through the whole progress of a quarrel which ended in a duel; and when the parties were supposed to have met, a pistol was put into his hand, which he fired, and he was awakened by the report. On another occasion, this same officer was found asleep on the top of a locker or bunker, in the cabin. His companions resolved to lead him into the belief that he had fallen overboard, and then exhorted him to save himself by swimming. He immediately imitated all the motions of swimming. They then told him that a shark was pursuing him, and entreated him to dive for his life.—He instantly threw himself off the locker, in diving fashions, with such force as to bruise himself on the floor. This of course awakened him. On a third occasion, after the landing of the troops at Louisburg, his companions found him asleep in his tent, and evidently much annoyed by the cannonading. They then made him believe he was engaged in action, when he expressed great fear, and showed an evident disposition to run away. Against this they remonstrated, but at the same time increased his fear by imitating the groans of the wounded and dying; and when he asked, as he often did, who had fallen, they named his particular friends. At last they told him the man next himself had fallen, whereupon he instantly sprang up rushed out of his tent, and was arowed from his danger and his dream together, by falling over the tent ropes.

SOARING CORN FOR HORSES.—A correspondent of the Prairie Farmer claims to save at least one-third of his corn by soaking it before he feeds it. His plan is this: He places two hogheads in his barn-cellar, secure from the frost, fills them with ears of corn and pours in water enough to cover them. When well soaked he feeds out of one to his horses, and by the time this is exhausted the corn in the other hoghead is well soaked. The cobs become so soft that the horses eat them with as good a relish as they do the corn, and they require only about two-thirds as much corn as when fed without soaking.—There is no doubt that the cob eaten with the corn renders the diet more wholesome.

A certain amount of coarse feed is necessary to the health of animals.
